MARY SCOTT, 5, 321 S. HIGH-ST TRAFFIC VICTIM

Sustains Fractured Skull and Crushed Chest; Youthful Driver Exonerated

Mary Virginia Scott, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Scott, 321 S. High-st, was almost instantly killed on S. High-st shortly before 11 o'clock this morning when she was struck by a truck driven by William Leffler, son of E. F. Leffler, 277 Hane-av meat dealer. The child's skull was fractured and her chest crushed.

The accident occurred at the intersection of an alley and almost directly in front of the child's home. According to the story of the accident as told by Leffler, who was delivering meat for his father, he had stopped at the L. I. Cox residence, 264 S. High-st and was approaching Bain-av when the child suddenly appeared from behind bushes which lined the alley entrance where she had been playing in the shade.

Sees Child in Street

Seeing the child dart into the street and realizing the danger, Leffler said he turned his truck to the east, hoping to swing out far enough to avoid striking her, but she ran directly into the path of the machine. She was struck by the right front wheel of the truck and thrown to the street with such force as to fracture her skull. One wheel passed over and crushed her chest.

Leffler stopped his truck at once and jumping to the street picked up the injured child and ran with her to the home of William Eibling, Bain-av, thinking she was their child. Mrs. Eibling recognized the child. She was taken to the home of her parents, Rachael McDougle, the 9-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. McDougle, S. High-st, was the only other witness to the accident.

Physician Called

Dr. L. L. Roebuck was called and a call was sent to central fire station for the pulmotor. Fire Chief T. J. McFarland with several firemen responded but their efforts proved useless.

The child was born in this city and would have started to school this fall. Surviving with her parents is one brother, Billy.

Police were called but no arrests were made when young Leffler was exonerated from all blame for the accident.

Municipal Judge William R. Martin was called to serve as coroner when efforts to locate Dr. Osborne, of Waldo, county coroner, were unsuccessful.

52,000 MESSAGES AT WHITE HOUSE

Washington, June 11 — Ten messenger boys staggered into the White House executive offices at 10 a. m. today, bearing the nation's telegraphic greetings to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

There were 52,000 messages in the load.

One of them was 520 feet in length and bore 17,000 signatures. It came from Minneapolis, and the signers were Minnesota well wishers of the flier. His father was formerly a congressman from Minnesota.

REPUBLICANS QUALIFY FOR ALL OFFICES

Democrats Fail To Place Candidates on Ticket for Five Posts

Unless the proverbial dark horse looms up on Marion's political horizon after the primaries and gets on the ballot as an independent candidate by petition Mayor Earl M. Hasen, Republican, and W. H. Hoberman, Democrat will lock horns for the office of mayor at the November election.

Both can save their energy for the November battle for neither will have any opposition at the primary.

Apathy that has marked the political situation with respect to the Municipal election this fall continued until the closing hour of the period for filing declarations last midnight. And then olyy enough candidate to provide at least one person to an office appeared at the election board office and filed their declarations.

Three Contests

With the exception of the Fourth Ward and for the office of Councilman-at-large there will be no contests in the primaries. Republicans succeeded in qualifying 16 candidates for the 14 offices while the Democrats came forth with only nine, failing to place one of their party in the race for the office of auditor and councilmen of the First, Third, Fifth and Sixth Wards.

Republicans have a candidate for every office, with two for the nomination as councilman of the Fourth Ward and four for the office of councilmen-at-large. There are three to be elected to the latter office.

Only one duplication is seen on the Democratic side of ledger with two men seeking the post of councilman of the Fourth Ward.

List of Candidates

The complete list of candidates follows:

For mayor—Mayor Earl Hasen, Republican; W. H. Hoberman, Democrat.

President of council—Emery M. Murphy, Republican; F. T. Campbell, Democrat.

Auditor—J. Luther Landes, Republican, now serving his third term.

Treasurer—Russell Shaw, Republi-

LINDY HAILED BY PRESIDENT AS GREAT HERO

Ringing Adjectives of Praise Are Showered on Youth by Coolidge

Monument Grounds, Washington, June 11—Ringing adjectives of praise and adoration accompanied President Coolidge's presentation of the distinguished flying cross to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today.

"Our ambassador without portfolio," the president termed the blond boy who beat the Atlantic—a boy "representing the best traditions of this country, of a stock known for its deeds of adventure and exploration."

Particularly did Mr. Coolidge dwell on the forcefulness and stability of character of the New York-to-Paris flier. Quoting from Lindbergh's record in the files of the militia bureau, the executive found him to be "intelligent," "industrious," "energetic," "dependable," "purposeful", "alert", "quick of reaction," "serious," "deliberate," "stable," "efficient," "frank," "modest," "congenial," "a man of good moral habits and regular in his business transactions."

Reads Like Prophecy

"One of the officers expressed his belief that the young man 'would successfully complete everything he undertakes,'" said the president. "This reads like a prophecy."

The text of the president's speech follows:

"My fellow countrymen:

"It was in America that the modern art of flying of heavier-than-air machines was first developed. As the experiments became successful, the airplane was devoted to practical purposes. It has been adopted to commerce in the transportation of passengers and mail and used for national defense by our land and sea forces. Beginning with a limited flying radius, its length has been gradually extended.

"We have made many flying records. Our army flyers have circum-navigated the globe. One of our navy men started from California and flew far enough to have reached Hawaii, but being off his course landed in the water. Another officer of the navy has flown to

One Hundred Thousand Persons Are Believed Jammed About Washington Memorial Shaft as Youth Is Received by Chief Executive of United States

MOTHER HONORED BY PRESIDENT AND MRS. COOLIDGE

Entire Assembly Stands as Speaker Refers to Her; New-York-to-Paris Aviator Appears Grave as Honors Are Bestowed on Him; Great Reception Held at Navy Yard

WASHINGTON, June 11 — Bearing a simple message of good will between peoples, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh came home today to receive such a reception as America has never accorded any of its distinguished heroes.

He had but one message, this youth whom President Coolidge described as "our ambassador without portfolio," and that he delivered briefly and simply after receiving the plaudits of a quarter of a million people and the highest honors at the disposal of the government.

Standing bare-headed and embarrassed before a vast throng of nearly 100,000 people in the shadow of the Washington monument, the tousle-haired youth said:

"On the evening of May 21 I arrived at Le Bourget. I spent a week in Paris, a day in Belgium, and some days in London. At every meeting I attended I was required to bring a message home to you. It was always the same message:

"'You have seen the affection of the people of France for the people of America demonstrated to you. When you return take back this message to the people of the United States from the people of Europe.'

"I thank you."

And that was all. He sat down.

The youth who departed virtually unknown a month ago, fortified with four hour conferences and enforced courses, appeared to find his enforced control at the end of each passage of his

Black Hills For To See

Rogers Will Stack Vermont's "Ruff and Rugged" Up Against South Dakota Any Time; Just Can't Figure Cal

BY WILL ROGERS

I DON'T know what Mr. Coolidge wants to go away out to the Black Hills in South Dakota for. If I was a man that was looking for some hills I sure wouldent pay any transportation away out to any South Dakota, I would go right up to a State called Vermont, and I would hunt up a place called Plymouth, and he will have him about as many hills as a man can scenically digest in any one vacation.

I have just been up there. Vermont has got Black ones, Green ones, White ones, any kind, color, shape, or size Hill that you want. Why when it comes to having hills Dakota is just an amateur. Vermont has misplaced more Hills than Dakotas Chamber of Commerce has on their list. So I don't know what he is going to the Black Hills to hunt hills for. Why Vermont has more hills in what they call their valleys than Dakota can produce on top of their hills. A Vermont farm don't lay. It hangs.

Maybe It's Something Else

When your corn grows up big enough to gather you go up on the farm and shake the ears off and they fall in the barn. Now that's as I say if a man is looking to vacate among the hills. Now you see that's what makes you lose confidence in him in a way, especially if you have been there and see what he is leaving. It kinder makes you doubt sometimes if he really is going to Dakota just on account of the Hills.

Now, I am not hinting anything. I am just sorter soliquising out loud. We will take for instance suppose he had during this last session of Congress vetoed a Maple Syrup bill, and there was enough Maple Syrup catchers to kinder clog up a few voting booths. Now, do you think he would a been hunting the hills of Dakota or the hills of Vermont? Suppose he had lowered the duty on imported Tombstones, and Vermont with her monotony of marking the spot "Where body was last seen." Don't it kinder look like he would a gone back up there for the summer to kinder cheer the boys up that had a surplus of stones on their hands, and the dying not hardly keeping up to normal? Yes, sir he would a done something for them, even if it was to put out a slogan, "Use home talent Tombstones. These foreign ones wont' last even till you are forgoiten." Now you see Maple Syrup and Tombstones are protected by the tariff, so there is no use going up there to pacify them this summer.

Fish Are In Vermont

Now it has been intimated by some that the fishing was what he was going to the Black Hills for. Now there's another misleading statement. There is more fish in Vermont than all the Dakotas put together. I imagine that Dakota (including the Non Partisan League) have more queer fish than Vermont. Vermont's is a more conservative fish. He dont go in for many new fangled ideas or new ways of doing things. You see, the reason there is more fish in Vermont is economy. The fishermen up there dont spare much bait. They try to get what few they can with just an empty hook. If you want to be extravagant and really use plenty why you can get all the great ... you want in Vermont. Here is ... thing I ever heard about the Black Hills. Its an old Cowboy Song ... noted Texas Outlaw "Sam Bass" ... here is the first few parts of ... was, as I say from Texas, but he is just up in the Black Hills before you know it in the Song.

Few Lines on Sam

Sam Bass was born in Indiana, it was his native home. Sam was ent crooked enough for Politics, he had to go and roam. Sam come down to Texas a Cowboy for to be. A kinder hearted fellow you seldom ever see. Sam used to deal in race stock one called the Denton Mare, he matched her in scrub races and took her to the fair. Sam used to make good money and spend it just as free. He always required good whiskey wherever he might be. Sam joined a Dokota trail herd the "Black Hills" for to see, sold out in Custer City and then got on a spree. On the way back to Texas they robbed a U. P. train. They then split up in couples and started out again. Joe Collins and his partner were overtaken soon. And with all their hard earned cash, they had to meet their doom.

Now that's the first part of the famous Sam Bass song. I was weaned on that, and the "dying Cowboy," and "Ty yi Yippy, ty yi ai." I always like that last line that I quoted above, "They robbed the U. P. train," and then a little later it says, "With all their hard earned cash they had to meet their doom." That "Hard earned cash" line after robbing a train always "Intrigued" me.

I am not trying to sing to you, or sell you a Song. I am only quoting all this to give you an idea of the kind of place that Cal has desires to see. There must be a bit of old Sam Bass blood in Cal. "He wants the Black Hills for to see." So you see Coolidge dont h... to go to the Black Hills to mak... nown. This song of Sam Bass ... people know the words of it, th... r National Anthem.

Bars Love Cal"

Sam when he got there as the song says "he got on a spree." I am kinder wondering just how Calvin will take to the wild life. I think he went, because if he stayed around the east all his life we would liable to get to thinking he was sorter effiminate, and he wanted to go out and rub up against some real He-Men. Out in the wide spaces where Men Are Men. And Farms Are Mortgaged. Where the Government has showed them every way in the World where they can borrow Money and never yet introduced an idea of how to pay any of it back. Where women are women and only get to town when they have to go to endorse a Note with their husbands. If your crop is a failure and you don't raise anything, why you are fortunate. Because it costs you more to raise anything than you can sell it for, so the less you raise the less you lose, and if you don't raise anything you are ahead.

Oh yes, I like to forget this Dakota is the first place that holds a Presidential Primary, and most states name as first choice some local celebrity. Well, Cal is going to furnish the Celebrity. They can't hardly turn down one of the "Boys from the Black Hills." Every State wants to please their Tourist element, and Dakota cant afford not to nominate their summer boarder. I know you will say "Yes, but aint that Bars in them thar Black Hills?" You thar is Bars in them thar Hills. "Wont the Bars hurt our little Cal?" No; them Bars will just love Little Cal.

"The carriage waits without, my Lord!"

Back in the elegant eighties, that was a favorite line with writers of English society drama. And producers of burlesque liked to follow it up thus: "Without what, James?"

Today, thousands of costly automobiles "wait without." They stand along the curbs apparently awaiting for their rightful owners—but, it turns out, they often are waiting for crooks who would assume their ownership.

Don't let your car wait without full insurance against thieves, bandits and joy-riders. The cost of Fire-and-Theft Insurance is too little, the value of your car too great, the risk is too ever-present.

ht from Europe to U. S. n as More Difficult

viation Experts Back Statement of Lindbergh

ARLES P. STEWART

TON, June 11—There's e original "Lone Eagle"

that, Lindy's performance so completely perfect by

PAUL HENDERSON

who was here visiting Postmaster General Harry

New, when Chamberlin and Levine landed in Germany.

AS how?—you ask; why wasn't Lindy's flight, as an independent stunt, just as perfect as perfection could make it?

Oh, it was, it was—agrees Henderson.

But look at it like this:

Was what Lindy did a stunt? Or was it something more than a stunt? Was there any good luck or accident about it? Was it something Lindy himself couldn't repeat, maybe?

Even if he could, was it simply a record he had hung up, that nobody else could equal?

Or had he blazed the way for others?

Hard on his heels, along came Chamberlin and Levine and demonstrated that he'd not only done something; he'd also shown others how to do it.

WASHINGTON fliers like General Patrick and Admiral Moffett, respectively of the army and navy air services, and Bill MacCracken, of the commerce department's aviation division, indorse what Henderson says.

They class Lindbergh with Columbus, as discoverer of a second shore to the western ocean.

They put Chamberlin in the same pigeon-hole with such pioneer navigators as Cabot and Hudson, who opened up traffic between the hemispheres, as soon as Christopher had revealed a plurality of them to run ships between.

They hand a medal to Lerine as the first transatlantic aerial passenger, who sends back word of Pilsener in Berlin, as Sir Walter Raleigh found tobacco in Virginia.

Only for Chamberlin, Levine and others who will follow in his wake, Henderson and the rest argue that Lindy would be in the position of his Norse ancestor, Lif Ericson, who reached the new world all right but didn't bequeath it to anybody.

WHAT the capital aviation enthusiasts are especially interested is now is a successful non-stop flight from Europe to America.

Lindbergh is qquoted as believing the westward trip more difficult than he found the voyage to the eastward. Making all due allowance for Charlie's modesty, experts think this may be true, because of weather conditions.

It's also taken into account that a flier to the westward must more strictly mind the p's and q's of his course than one bound to the eastward.

From the North Cape to Gibraltar an airman can hardly fail to find a more or less hospitable spot for a landing on the thickly-settled European coast. On this side of the water he's likely to find himself in a howling wilderness anywhere above about latitude 50, which is approximately in line with the southernmost tip of England.

So, the west-to-east problem having been solved, it's on the east-to-west trans-atlantic aerial journey that the aviation profession has its attention fixed at present.

...e north pole. Our own country has been traversed from shore to shore in a single flight.

Story of Valor

"It had been apparent for some time that the next great feat in the air would be a continued flight from the mainland of America to the mainland of Europe. Two courageous Frenchmen made the reverse attempt and passed to a fate that is as yet unknown. Others were speeding their preparations to make the trial, but it remained for an unknown youth to tempt the elements and win. It is the same story of valor and victory by a son of the people that shines through every page of American history.

"Twenty-five years ago there was born in Detroit, a boy, representing the best traditions of this country, of a stock known for its deeds of adventure and exploration. His father, moved with a desire for public service, was a member of congress for several terms. His mother, who dowered her son with her own modesty and charm, is with us today. Engaged in the vital profession of school-teaching, she has permitted neither money nor fame to interfere with her fidelity to her duties. Too young to have enlisted in the World War, her son became a student at one of the big state universities. His interest in aviation led him to an army aviation school; and in 1925 he was graduated as an airplane pilot. In November, 1926, he had reached the rank of captain in the Officers' Reserve Corps. Making his home in St. Louis, he had joined the one hundredth and tenth observation squadron of the Missouri National Guard.

Some of His Qualities

Some of his qualities noted by the army officers who examined him for promotion, as shown by reports in the files of the militia bureau of the war department, are as follows: "intelligent," "industrious," "energetic," "dependable," "purposeful," "alert," "quick of action," "serious," "deliberate," "stable," "efficient," "frank," "modest," "congenial," "a man of good moral habits and regular in all his business transactions." One of the officers expressed his belief that the young man "would successfully complete everything he undertakes." This reads like a prophecy.

"Later he became connected with the United States mail service, where he exhibited marked ability, and from which he is now on leave of absence.

"On a morning just three weeks ago yesterday, this wholesome, earnest, fearless, courageous product of America rose into the air from Long Island in a monoplane christened 'The Spirit of St. Louis,' in honor of his home and that of his supporters. It was no haphazard adventure. After months of the most careful preparation, supported by a valiant character, driven by an unconquerable will and inspired by the imagination and the spirit of his Viking ancestors, this reserve officer set wing across the dangerous stretches of the North Atlantic. He was alone. His destination was Paris.

"Thirty-three hours and thirty minutes later, in the evening of the second day, he landed at his destination on the French flying field at Le Bourget. He had traveled over 3,600 miles and established a new and remarkable record. The execution of his project was a perfect exhibition of art.

"This country will always remember the way in which he was received by the people of France, by their president, and by their government. It was the more remarkable because they were mourning the disappearance of their intrepid countrymen, who had tried to span the Atlantic on a western flight.

"Our messenger of peace and good will had broken down another barrier of time and space and brought two great peoples into closer communion. In less than a day and a half he had crossed the ocean over which Columbus had traveled for 69 days, and the Pilgrim fathers for 66 days, on their way to the new world. But, above all, in showering applause and honors upon this genial, modest American youth, with the naturalness, the simplicity and the pose of true greatness, France had the opportunity to show clearly her good will for America and our people. With like acclaim and evidences of cordial friendship our ambassador without portfolio was received by the rulers, the governments and the peoples of England and Belgium. From other nations came hearty messages of admiration for him and for his country. For these manifold evidences of friendship we are profoundly grateful.

Returns Unspoiled

"The absence of self-acclaim, the refusal to become commercialized, which has marked the conduct of this sincere and genuine exemplar of fine and noble virtures, has endeared him to every one. He has returned unspoiled. Particularly has it been delightful to have him refer to his airplane as somehow possessing a personality and being equally entitled to credit with himself, for we are proud that in every particular this silent partner represented American genius and industry. I am told that more than 100 separate companies furnished materials, parts, or service in its construction.

"And now, my fellow citizens, this young man has returned. He is here. He has brought his unsullied fame home. It is our great privilege to welcome back to his native land, on behalf of his own people, who have a deep affection for him and have been thrilled by his splendid achievement, a colonel of the United States Officers' Reserve Corps, an illustrious citizen of our republic, a conqueror of the air and strengthener of the ties which bind us to our sister nations across the sea, and, as president of the United States, I bestow the distinguished flying cross, as a symbol of appreciation for what he is and what he has done, upon Col. Charles A. Lindbergh."

this? he asked rather wonderingly on the bridge of the Memphis, when the destroyers first came out, and the same question appeared to occupy him as the passage up the muddy Potomac unfolded ever-increasing honors—salutes reserved for presidents and potentates, dare-devil maneuvers by his brother-flyers, and cheers, cheers, cheers.

Bareheaded, his hair a tousle over his forehead, but smiling almost incredulously at the welcome, the slim youth stood on the bridge during the slow process of warping the vessel into her dock. He appeared embarrassed as the salvos of cheers and applause reached him from the 2,000 persons closely packed on the dock. His right hand, then his left, rose and fell automatically as he surveyed the scene. Vice Admiral Burrage stood on the bridge with him.

Beneath him on the deck were two enormous cranes bearing his precious ship "The Spirit of St Louis." A giant hoisting crane stood nearby ready to take the crates off the ship and rush them to Bolling Field for immediate assembly. He is going to fly that ship to another tremendous greeting in New York on Monday.

Crowd Growing

Even the clang of the gangplank going down did not move him to leave the bridge. He stood there apparently non-plussed as the crowd surged forward around the gangplank. He looked for all the world like a college youth, his hair blowing in the breeze, his demeanor one of apparent shyness. If he was embarrassed at the acclaim of Paris and London he appeared doubly so when the acclaiming was being done by "home folk."

Meanwhile at the Washington Monument grounds, the crowd gathering to see him decorated by President Coolidge was steadily growng in proportions, and Pennsylvania-av was packed.

When the crowd started surging toward the gangplank, Lindbergh hurriedly left the bridge, shaking hands with ship's officers as he went below. Reaching the dock, he came to the rail and waved to the crowd.

Mother Comes First

By this time the marines had succeeded in impressing upon the more impetuous that nobody was going aboard ahead of Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, and the crowd stopped short. The marines cleared a pathway to the foot of the gangplank and a White House automobile swept up to it. In it were his mother, accompanied by John Hays Hammond, the Washington philanthropist who is chairman of the capital's reception committee.

A naval officer offered her his arm as she stepped from the machine.

At the top of the plank, the officer gallantly stepped aside to allow Mrs. Lindberg to be the first to step aboard. As she did so, her son hurriedly left the rail and, crossing the deck, disappeared into a cabin, and met her.

Mother and son met with no curious eyes to observe them.

The privacy of this meeting seemed to disappoint some of the crowd on the dock, but it was conceded to be characteristic of both. Mrs. Lindbergh has consistently shunned the limelight since her son sprung meteorlike fame, and the youth has not sought publicity.

The meeting between mother and son was over quickly. Their faces wreathed in smiles, they emerged from the cabin to meet on the deck the secretaries of war and navy, the postmaster general and other officials.

Steps on American Soil

Then the youth appeared to want to get ashore and he did so speedily. His foot struck American soil again at 11:55 a. m., within three minutes after his mother had crossed the gang plank.

A thunderous cheer went up as the youth strode down the gangplank. Boats in the harbor, seeming to sense he was ashore, set off their sirens, automobiles in the streets outside honked their horns, and the place was a bedlam. A surging crowd almost—but not quite—swept away the guarding marines.

He shook hands with a score of people before the officers succeeded in clearing a path for him to the White House machine.

His mother was close on his heels and they entered the car within a few minutes after landing. The guns of the Memphis boomed out in compliment to the secretary of the navy, which is an orthodox procedure, but everybody thought it was for Lindbergh.

His nervousness appeared to increase as the bedlam continued, and as the crowd pressed more and more tightly about the machine.

Leave Navy Yard

He rose from his seat in the open machine, waved his hand, flushed and then sat down again precipitately, as if fearful that he might say something.

John Hays Hammond got into the car at this moment, and the chauffeur shuffled his gears and moved off as quickly as he could without killing a lot of government rank.

The length of time it took warp the Memphis into the dock—she only had a foot's clearance in the narrow Washington channel—somewhat disrupted the reception plans. Mrs. Lindbergh did not wait to have luncheon aboard, as planned. Her son said he had eaten sandwiches at 10:30 o'clock so the luncheon went by the boards.

It was noted that Lindbergh did not appear in his new colonel's uniform, which was delivered to him by a destroyer of the Virginia Capes yesterday. It was a spick and span new outfit, all burnished up with the silver eagles that denotes the colonelcy, but apparently the youth would have none of it. At least, he strode down the gangplank in a double-breasted civilian suit of blue.

Weare Decoration

The reason was not advanced, it was recalled that the army had come in for some criticism by allegedly trying to "crowd" the flier into a uniform for his homecoming.

On the left lapel of his coat gleamed a brilliant bit of red that denotes the French Legion of Honor. Above that was a small button with wings—the emblem of the "quiet bird" organization of pilots. He had worn this on his lonely flight across the Atlantic, and it was noted that it still stood above the French decoration.

At a snail's pace, necessitated partly because of the physical impossibility of moving fast, and partly to give the patient thousands an opportunity for a good view of the boy, the White House automobile moved out of the great stone archway of the navy yard and into the southeastern stretch of Pennsylvania-av. This part of the avenue is below the capital where the parade was scheduled to begin.

Streets Are Jammed

The parading troops were deployed through the numerous avenues and streets that run away from the circular plaza where the peace monument stands, but some units fell in as the automobile proceeded towards the capitol.

The crowd in the navy yard surged out in the wake of the machine, and within 10 minutes, save for the guards, it was as deserted as at midnight.

Southeast Washington, where the navy yard is located, makes no pretensions of being a fashionable section of the capitol. The police bear witness to the fact there are some "tough customers down southeast," but the more elite northwest never fell for "Lindy" any more heartily than did the thousands of workers in the southeast section.

Outside the gates, Lindbergh got a foretaste of what was in store for him in that mile stretch between the capitol and the treasury. The sidewalks were jammed with people who had been there since early morning, and the embarrassed youth rode in that limousine with the din of cheering hitting him from both sides.

The passage to the capitol was quickly accomplished. Both Mrs Lindbergh and her son glanced curiously at the huge dome, gleaming in the sun. It was not unfamiliar to them, although it is doubtful if either ever expected to see it exactly under such circumstances. They left that same capitol 10 years ago, when the young hero's father retired from congress a disillusioned man.

Parade is On

Across the capitol plaza there was a short halt until a troop of the third cavalry, "the President's Own" swung smartly into place and the parade was on.

The avenue, brilliant in the noonday sun and aflame with color as far as the eye could see, must have presented an inspiring and somewhat awesome spectacle to the boy, and his mother as their machine turned into its broad expanse. Everywhere were people, cheering people, and flags. It was such a homecoming as politicians dream of—and never get.

The cavalry set a smart pace down the avenue, the clattering hoof beats lost in the swelling tide of cheers and applause that rose from both sides. Lindbergh continually waved his hand at the people, his face showing his embarrassment. He smiled continually.

Then came the turn into Fifteenth-st by the treasury, and thence it was but a short distance into the monument grounds. There a more imposing spectacle greeted the young flier's astonished gaze.

50,000 About Shaft

Beneath the towering white shaft erected to Washington were 50,000 people, spread out in indiscriminate confusion, but closely packed. The grass was invisible at any spot on the many-acred lot.

A few minutes after the president and Mrs. Coolidge arrived a tremendous roar went up from thousands of throats in the monument throng. It preceded the dramatic entrance of the hero of the day. The roar began at Fifteenth-st, and rumbled continuously apace with his car as, surrounded by the smartly trotting cavalry guard, it swept up to the stand.

Anthem Is Played

The marine band struck up the anthem as the president appeared on the platform, and Mr. Coolidge stood with his hat across his breast facing the gleaming monument.

Overhead a squadron of airplanes deployed in battle formation.

A ring of friendly elms gave a natural border to the theatre on the northern side while the raised mound at the base of the monument formed a natural gallery to the south.

The cheering was continuous, and the heat terrific in that close-packed multitude.

All around, as far as the eye could see, the tops of buildings and windows of their upper doors were packed with other thousands.

Seated in the stand were the highest officials of the government, the army, the navy and the venerable justices of the supreme court, the diplomatic corps, and such others whose "pull" was sufficient to get them the coveted admission—all present to honor the 24-year-old youth that none of them had ever heard of six weeks ago.

Unique Experience

It was an unique experience not only for "Slim" Lindbergh, but also for Calvin Coolidge. It was probably one of the few times in history that the president of the United States ever waited for anybody, and also one of the few occasions, if ever, when the president of the United States was not the principal actor in the show.

Mr. Coolidge sat and calmly surveyed the multitude until the tremendous roar from the outer reaches of the crowd warned him that the hero of the hour was approaching. Then, as if unable to restrain his curiosity, he rose with members of his cabinet and the venerable justices of the supreme court and they all strained their necks like any ordinary persons to catch a glimpse of this youth who in four short weeks has flown into the hearts of the world.

Greeted by Coolidge

As the machine stopped afront the stand with a yip from the brakes, the band swung into Sousa's famous old march, "The Stars and Stripes Forever," Lindbergh stepped out, helped his mother alight, and together they went arm in arm up the steps to where the president greeted them with outstretched hand and a quiet smile.

There was a moment of general handshaking. Then everybody sat down, and the president walked to the front of the platform and began speaking.

Fan-like microphones carried his voice far out over the heads of the vast crowd, and it was but a moment until the crowd was strangley silent, listening to the chief magistrate speak the nation's pride in this youth and his epochal achievement.

As the president began to speak the thousands who had lined the avenue swarmed into the monument grounds until every inch of sod on the great rolling slope was black with humanity. The original 50,000 was probably doubled by these recruits.

The crowd burst into cheers as the president referred to the great feats accomplished in aviation by Americans in the past and then spoke on "the unknown boy who braved the Atlantic."

Lindbergh, wearing his French Legion of Honor ribbon and other decorations, sat quietly beside Secretary of War Davis while the president spoke. The youth's smile was missing and he looked a trifle grave and tired.

The crowd broke the president's discourse a second time when he said:

"His mother endowed her son with her own modesty and charm."

This brought the multitude to its collective feet in spontaneous tribute to Mrs. Lindbergh. They cheered until Mrs. Lindbergh arose and bowed acknowledgement.

Mrs. Coolidge led in this tribute, the first lady arising even before the crowd got to its feet.

Again the crowd cheered when President Coolidge cited Lindbergh's admirable record in the air reserve corps.

The crowd roared again when the president said: "This country will always remember how this young man was received by the people of France."

"We sure will," and "you said it," were some of the indorsements given the president's words.

The might throng rose, cheering madly, when the president finally turned and said: "As president of the United States I bestow the distinguish flying cross, as a symbol of appreciation for what he is and what he has done."

Secretary Davis handed the cross to the president and Mr Coolidge pinned it to the left lapel of Lindbergh's coat. The youth's smile was still missing and now he seemed a little awed. At this moment, navy men released a flock of 48 homing pigeons. The birds rose in mass formation, started toward the monument, rose in a graceful turn, swung back over the stand and rose rapidly into the sky toward the southeast.

Then Lindbergh arose.

He stepped forward in a hush and briefly spoke his thanks to the president and the throng.

unusual successes at Cincinnati, Indianapolis and other large centers. Crowds call throughout each day at the Stump Pharmacy, (Stump and Sams), 121 South Main Street, to hear him explain this compound, and at the same time, many sincere, convincing reports come from local people who were relieved of various forms of stomach, liver and kidney troubles by this advanced medicine.

Mr. O. C. Lucas, a Marion man at the age of 83, living at 182 Fairview Street, this city, made a detailed report of the work of Konjola in his case.

"I was greatly troubled with disordered kidneys," said Mr. Lucas. "This caused me to rise 8 and 10 times a night, which broke up my rest so that I was always weak and stiff in the mornings. My back was achy at all times. Black spots would frequently appear before my eyes and dizzy spells came over me. I was told this was due to liver trouble, and most of the time I had a bad, bitter taste in my mouth. My nerves were pretty bad, owing to all these health troubles, and with no rest at night, I seemed to lose all the strength I had and was nothing more than a set-in.

"In this condition I began taking Konjola. It turned out to be the medicine I was always needing. Daily Proverb—"Proud looks lose hearts, but courteous words win them."

Welcome home, Charles! You can't imagine how glad we are to see you again!

Senator Borah's silence is explained. He has been having his tonsils removed.

There is nothing about the gas bills paid this week to indicate that the longest day of the year is but ten days away.

Mr. Borah is pretty shrewd, and it's not impossible that he has hit upon the idea that the easiest way in which he can attract attention is by keeping still.

Henry Ford says that "the price of man's advancement is the faithful use of what he has." "Uncle Henry," we assume, means this to include the faithful use of heads.

Attorney General Sargent seems to have appraised the opinion of Earl Carroll's physicians at just about what a lot of the so-called expert professional testimony uttered under retainer is worth.

Mrs. Lindbergh refused the invitations of various railroads and paid her way to Washington. We are getting to like the mother for herself almost as well as we like her for her son.

There were 266 homicides in England and Wales in 1926 and about 12,000 here in the United States. The explanation is that in England and Wales the punishment of criminals is a practice. Over here it is merely a theory.

The Atlanta prison doctors say that Earl Carroll isn't sick, but just thinks he is. Earl must be a man subject to delusions. For a number of years he thought he was above the law.

"Let's get Lindbergh," suggests the Philadelphia Record, "to ask him about a third term." Can it be that the Record didn't note any measure at all of the diplomacy displayed by our foremost airman over in Europe?

Field Marshal Haig says the British armies played the supreme part in the great World war and would have won even if the Americans hadn't come to the aid of the allies. What a different tune ten years have worked!

It must be conceded that the robbers who cracked the safe in the Oklahoma penitentiary, a few nights ago, were fairly decent about the thing. They were mighty careful not to disturb the slumbers of the prison officials and guards.

A survey shows that but six of 568 Harding High school pupils have taken out permits to work during the summer vacation. When, a few days ago, we referred to the changed conditions which thirty to forty years have wrought regarding the employment of school youths before and after school hours and during vacations we little imagined that verification of our statement was so near at hand. Forty years ago, the figures would have been reversed. All but six would probably have been working.

Signal Honor to McFarland.

Without any showing whatever on his part, we are going to acquit our friend, Fire Chief McFarland, of being the shrewdest politician ever and playing upon the well-recognized tendency of the American people to insist upon doing that which they are told they must not do. We know that he was sincere in his endeavor to sidetrack the movement on foot among the members of the State Association of Fire Chiefs again to elect him as their head. And we believe the members of the organization appreciated the fact that he was absolutely sincere in announcing, when news of the movement came to his attention, that the honor must not be given to him again; that the good of the organization demanded that it go elsewhere. Yes, we believe that all the membership, recognized his sincerity, but at the same time refused to recognize him as the final authority upon what the good of the body demanded. In a word, his brother fire chiefs, recognizing the worth of his views on fire-fighting, convinced themselves that he didn't know what he was talking about when it came to the matter of the presidency of their organization.

In any event, the delegates in attendance at the convention over in Mansfield, overruling his objection, voted unanimously that he should serve once more as president of the state association, and, to be quite frank about the matter, we are free to say that it is our belief that they manifested a high degree of judgment in so doing.

Tom McFarland is an enthusiast on the art of fire-fighting. He has made it his life study. He is recognized as one of the best, if not the best, of the fire chiefs of Ohio. Such a vote as was given him at Mansfield is an honor of which any man should be proud, and, despite the fact that it was against his desire and over his objection, we feel sure that it must have warmed his heart.

Incidentally, we have here a case of an office of honor and dignity actually seeking the man.

To the Aviator and the Man.

The entire United States in one way or another is today paying tribute to Charles A. Lindbergh, such tribute, probably, as has never been paid to human-being before. And while we are doing him honor here in his home land, the remainder of the civilized world is looking on to note if the greeting given him by his own government and his own people, upon his return from the accomplishment of a feat without parallel in all history, measures up to what it believes is his due, for he apparently has made such an impression upon the world as never before had been made by man.

We have expressed the belief that his flight was easily the greatest individual feat of all history. Undaunted by the fate of Nungesser and Coli, he hopped off in the face of such weather conditions as had held up other aviators for days and, battling fog and sleet, made a perfect flight from New York to Paris—a flight marvelous for the precision with which he held his course—landing with the same masterly skill at Le Bourget and manifesting the same cool confidence in himself and his plane as had marked his taking-off from this side of the Atlantic.

And in comparing any and all feats with this, one vital fact must be kept in mind, it was Lindbergh who demonstrated that the broad expanse of the Atlantic could be crossed in a non-stop flight by a heavier-than-air machine. He had the confidence, the courage, the daring and the skill to demonstrate the possibility. He blazed the way. It doesn't take the same degree of confidence, of courage, of daring, to follow a course over which another has gone.

But great as was Lindbergh's feat in crossing the Atlantic, we seriously question if he would hold the place which is his in the heart of the world today, both at home and abroad, had his accomplishment ended at Le Bourget. We even question if the accomplishment of Lindbergh, the aviator, outranks that of Lindbergh, the man. Since his arrival in Paris he has met all kinds and classes of people. He has run the gamut from the lowliest to those of the highest degree. He has eaten with the humble and been feted by the high. And through it all he has been the same unaffected youth. He has been his plain, straightforward, unassuming, courteous self through it all. And if, during his stay in Europe and on his way home, he has uttered a single word or even made a gesture inconsistent with the highest and best in manhood and sportsmanship, it entirely escaped the attention of the public or the representatives of the press. Untutored in the art of diplomacy, he has proved himself to be the best diplomat this country has ever had abroad. Diplomats of the Old and the New world alike have marveled at the poise of this young man of twenty-five under any and all circumstances.

And it is as much to the character of the man as the feat of the aviator that the world today holds him as it does no other man.

The government of the Irish Free state won the election over there and Eamon de Valera lost out again. It's a wonder that Eamon is unable to get next to the apparent fact that Ireland doesn't feel she needs him nearly so badly as he thinks she does.

Three items appeared on the front page of a morning paper, a day or two ago, telling of the deaths of two women who had passed their 103d year and one over 100. The explanation is, of course, that they got good starts before the devil-wagons became chronic.

Spurred to exceptional activity by taunts directed at its air service, France is planning to send two planes over to circle the Statue of Liberty and then return home in a non-stop flight. Wouldn't it be fully as well were they to attempt to negotiate a flight one way first?

It begins to look as though those who committed almost every known form of violence in stealing Russia are beginning to realize that they have developed a monster which is liable to steal it away from them in the same way.

The worm will turn. A "drug store cowboy" stood for being held up by a gunman and being robbed of his watch and what money he had, but when the gunman attempted to appropriate to his own use a pass to a dance the trouble began and the gunman, knocked unconscious, was turned over to the police. No one has ever been able to explain it fully, but some people would just about as soon suffer the loss of a leg as the loss of a pass.

The gathering of snow and sleet upon aeroplanes should not prove an insurmountable problem. The same degree of genius which developed the plane to its present form should be capable of perfecting some electrical device for melting snow and sleet off of it.

"A well-known American aviator now in Germany," says the Columbus Dispatch, "will be well advised if he says just as little as possible—which is nothing at all—about the 'luck' of Lindbergh in getting straight through to his pre-determined place of landing at Paris." His companion in the enterprise, who at times steered and at times was a passenger, seems already to have spilled the beans as it is

Poems That Live.

O, LAY THY HAND IN MINE, DEAR.

O, lay thy hand in mine, dear!
We're growing old;
But Time hath brought no sign, dear,
That hearts grow cold.
'Tis long, long since our new love
Made life divine;
But age enricheth true love,
Like noble wine.

And lay thy cheek to mine, dear,
And take thy rest;
Mine arms around thee twine, dear,
And make thy nest.
A-many cares are pressing
On this dear head;
But Sorrow's hands in blessing
Are surely laid.

O, lean thy life on mine, dear!
'Twill shelter thee.
Thou wert a winsome vine, dear
On my young tree;
And so, till boughs are leafless,
And song-birds flown,
We'll twine, then lay us, griefless,
Together down.

MY WORLD "AMBASSADOR OF PEACE."

Headaches Warn of Collapse.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Nobody enjoys pain. It makes no difference what its form may be, or where it is located, pain is pain and everybody hates it.

One of the most common varieties of pain is headache. Only a few fortunate persons escape it. Most of us have it occasionally, if not every day.

Headache powders and pills, tablets and drops are among the most popular of remedies. Every family has its favorite drug for the control of this symptom. Few persons have the patience to find out why the frequent headache comes, and immediately upon the onset of the attack rush for the pain-destroying drug.

There is always a fundamental reason for headaches. That should be found.

Today I want to talk to you about the tired person's headache. It is one of the familiar signs of overwork and overworry. Rushing along at express speed and robbing Nature of necessary sleep must do damage to your body. Headache is the signal intended to warn you of your danger.

I have often thought that a violent sick headache, bad as it is to bear, is really an affliction given you in all kindliness by watchful and friendly Mother Nature. She knows you need rest and sleep. You won't take them of your own accord so she smites you down with a blinding headache, causing you to rush to bed in a darkened room. The quiet and grateful coolness of your chamber lull you to sleep. Those extra hours of rest relieve the headache, but, more than this, they restore frazzled nerves. For the time being you are back to normal and ready for normal activity.

But you are not ready for overwork, no matter how well you may feel. As a matter of fact, you feel so good when the agonizing headache is gone that you think you can abuse your body without limit. But you can't. You must pay for all the exhausting and unreasonable neglect of your welfare.

The remedy for tired headaches is rest. The way to prevent such headaches is to avoid undue fatigue.

But I haven't told you the whole story: The headaches are merely the beginning of what will happen to your nervous system. If you don't watch out, your nerves will give way and you will become a nervous wreck.

Big, husky men, as well as more delicate and highly organized women, think they can go on indefinitely in their demands upon the bank of health. It can't be done. Disaster awaits foolish disregard of this truth.

Why don't you take care of your precious body? Your family and friends think it is worth saving, even if you don't!—Copyright, 1927.

Editorial Comment.

HO, HUM!

There would be little hope of getting far in attempting anything like a serious reply to the Kansas City woman, Mrs. C. T. Goodale, who has undertaken to tell what is the matter with the world. It seems that a man of the Missouri city dared fate when he wrote, thoughtlessly or facetiously, that the ideal woman is "eighteen and dumb—the dumber the better."

Accepting a thought that is all too prevalent, that there is something vitally wrong with the world, Mrs. Goodale's diagnosis is "dumb women." She enlarges the thought with this statement: "The trouble with the world today, as it always has been, is that too many antiquated dumbbells have been the mothers of the race." That is a blow in the face of every man who honors his mother, and he is a rare specimen who doesn't. A little sentiment easily disposes of that charge.

More will agree with Mrs. Goodale's statement that "the position of wife and mother is the most important a woman can fill." Then she jumps at men with the admonition that they owe posterity a duty and should provide better mothers for the race.

But is there much of anything the matter with the world? The creation of a better one would be a big job. As for posterity, it has always managed to take care of itself fairly well. There is, however, the possibility that posterity may be misguided by a lot of prattle that will be dangerous, when it is more than amusing.

Ho, hum!—Toledo Blade.

THE SHERIFF SAVES TAMPA.

What happened before the Tampa jail is an example of what can be done by public officials determined not to give way to mob assault. The resolute resistance of the sheriff and his deputies frustrated a rabble more than ordinarily pertinacious in its efforts to storm the jail. Bullets, ammonia and water proved insufficient to disperse them, but the lawless assemblage found the courage of the jail's defenders more than equal to their own. For six hours they were kept at bay, coming to their senses only after the arrival of national guardsmen.

Public officials have been known to quail in less dangerous situations than this. In fact, the majority of lynchings occur only when the peace officer in charge of the prisoner weakens at the first show of strength. Too often he secretly sympathizes with the unruly passions and is only too glad for an excuse to turn the culprit over to the mob. Had the Tampa officials been so minded they would have had more than ordinary excuse. Their conduct under fire shows that they are made of the right kind of stuff. While the behavior of the crowd is a sad blemish on our civilization, Tampa has reason to congratulate herself that she has put law and order in the keeping of men who will let Judge Lynch step in only over their dead bodies.—Louisville Herald-Post.

TURNING THE SOAP BOX.

Not long ago Prime Minister Baldwin urged the Conservative speakers not to let the Communists have all the outdoor meetings. Apparently this advice was taken to heart a couple of weeks since. An advertisement of a meeting in Holborn was printed in the Labor organ, the Daily Herald, reading, "Hands Off China—Come and Hear the Truth."

Before 9 o'clock the hall was filled. A woman was in the chair, and soon introduced "Comrade Glendilling" from the Clyde. He began with some harsh remarks about British imperialism which seemed to take the fancy of the audience, and then suddenly called out, "Hands off China. But whose hands?" He answered his own question by saying with emphasis, "Why, the dirty hands of Red Russia."

The audience naturally gaped with surprise, but the speaker warmed to his task. He told his hearers that it was, as they had seen, perfectly easy to serve up the kind of communist rubbish with which so many have tried to mislead British workingmen, but now, perhaps for the first time in their lives, they were going to hear the truth.

Some attempts were made to howl him down, but he persisted, and the spirit of fair play in the audience, together with perhaps admiration of the way in which he had tricked them into listening to his views, got him a hearing, and he finally sat down amid at least as many cheers as boos.—New York Times.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

Listen to these words of a business man, not a college professor. They are the words of S. W. Utley, president of the Detroit Steel Castings corporation: "The college man must realize that he has stepped into an unknown field that is ruled by complex forces which nevertheless are as strong, as definite, as enduring as those with which he is acquainted in physics and chemistry. He will succeed or fail as he attunes his efforts and his life to these forces and works with them. He must realize that society rewards the individual in proportion to the contribution he makes to it."

Do you seek to lay your burden down? Don't be too eager to shirk it. Don't be too eager to rid yourself of the load you carry. Some day you may find that the burden you have borne was a blessing. It was the thing you needed to build up your character and make you strong. The thing that seems a handicap may be the one thing needful for your soul's good. All men need discipline. Without discipline there is no going forward. And we can not expect the burden of discipline to be easy to bear.

Everest, the highest mountain peak on the earth, is still conconquered. Its summit has been the goal of brave and curious men for years. Some have lost their lives in the fatal climb. Man's whole history has been the story of his struggle against and over the barriers of nature. Nature is a worthy foe. She has not yet lost all her battles. It speaks well for progress when men are willing to risk everything that the rest of the world of men may know more about the earth, their dwelling place.

There is a great deal of bunk said and written about the foreign policy of the United States, what it is and what it ought to be. This nation ought not to have a hard and fast "foreign policy," except one in the most general terms. The United States, must adapt itself to foreign problems as they arise. Guided by the single desire to do justly, she will not go wrong.—Copyright, 1927.

Views of Those in Public Eye.

EDWARD A. SHERMAN.

Edward Augustine Sherman was born in Humboldt county, Iowa, March 5, 1871. Sherman was active in the newspaper business in Iowa and Hamilton, Montana, until appointed supervisor of Bitter Root forest reserve in 1903. He was transferred to the forest service, department of agriculture in 1905, rising through the department until he became associate chief forester in 1920. Sherman is also a lawyer, having been admitted to the Utah bar in 1915. He has formulated the land classification system for the national forests.

Assistant Chief Sherman is of the opinion that reforestation will enter into any flood-control plan adopted, no matter what the plan may be. He says:

"Reforestation and forest protection will unquestionably enter into any plan for the future control of the Mississippi. Claims that the present flood is due to forest destruction or claims that reforestation has no bearing upon flood prevention are both exaggerations. Every acre of land in the immense catchment basin of the Mississippi system contributes, in one form or another, at one time or another, to the flood problem. It is idle to say the scores of millions of acres of forest land within this basin have no relation to the flood problem. The plans for preventing a recurrence of a flood of this magnitude must, as one of their essential factors, include the reforestation of the headwaters of the Mississippi and its tributaries.

"Although excessive precipitation in the main basin of the Mississippi is a major cause of the present flood, many of its tributaries have contributed their own floods. Extensive deforestation on the head waters of innumerable feeder streams is partly responsible for rapid melting of snow and for the rapid run-off of snow water and rainfall. Deforestation, accompanied by repeated fires, has likewise encouraged erosion of the soil. These effects are particularly pronounced in hilly and mountainous country where cutover land is not extensively reclaimed for agriculture, and where repeated fires have progressively denuded the soil."

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, June 11—Love-making is perhaps more public in New York than in any other American city. This is a by-product of congestion. There is no place to spoon and timidity is sacrificed. In the evening bus tops are loaded with spooners.

They kiss and clinch openly. And New York thoughtfully looks the other way. It is not unusual when traffic desolation hits Fifth avenue to see couples, arm in arm, suddenly stop and embrace as their eyes grow starry and moist.

In the cafes they hold hands across the table and frequently lean over to press lips together. On the dance floors there is no effort at surreptitious osculation. Park benches are dotted with knots of love-makers who pay no attention to passersby.

And in the movies! Dunt ask! When lights go up, there they sit in enraptured embraces and between acts at legitimate theaters seems merely a hiatus for a display of affection. They stroll out hand in hand a little pathetically for a peep at the moon.

These are not the rather vulgar neckers of the dance halls. They are the average healthy young folk in love. There are no shaded streets, porch hammocks, dim parlors or lover's lanes. And so in their own way they make the best of it.

In the hotel lobbies, the managements seem to understand. They may occupy deep cushioned divans with no house detectives questioning right of their presence. St. Paul's and Trinity's grave yards are filled with them at noon time—whispering the oldest story while sitting on tombstones.

Carriage grabbing has become such a nuisance in the theatrical district that several fights have resulted. Hordes of petty grafters line the curbs. When a prospective fare hails a taxi the grafter rushes out to the running board, hops on it and opens the door. He expects a tip and if it isn't forthcoming he slams the door and hurls a guttery epithet. Last week, one who didn't get a tip, slammed the door as it happened on a lady's hand. Her escort leaped out and knocked him old and a policeman patted him on the back and told him to go on.

I know of no place where a comeback receives such cheering applause as on Broadway. Several years ago a young juvenile wound up a period of drug addiction with a prison sentence. He had gone swiftly from his silk-hatted role to the shuffling line at the prisoner's dock. He came out with bright eyes and a healthy complexion, cured. When he faced his first audience he received a greater ovation than the star.

Dancing girls whose every movement seems perfect synchonization are running away with summer revues. It has become a hightly specialized bit of artistry. Also it is noticed usherettes are being supplanted by young men again. The female usher came into vogue during the "Big Fuss" and the idea held over until recently. It was not a very profitable job for women. Men hesitated to tip them and without tips salaries are scarcely worth while. Too, it is said, many of the usherettes held job during the day and the extra labor was beyond their physical strength.—Copyright, 1927.

BORN BROTHERS CONTEND BRICK HOMES CHEAPER

First Cost Greater, but Upkeep and Depreciation Less Than Frame, Claim

In February of 1926 Born Brothers, of this city, conceived the idea of a brick house, with the express purpose of proving to the public what little difference there really is between brick and frame construction. So well have they succeeded, that their experiment has been the direct cause of quite a few houses being built in the last year.

It is their contention that, although the initial cost being possibly eight to ten per cent more, the general upkeep is so greatly reduced that in a few years the house of brick construction is by far the cheaper, with the resale value at a much higher figure.

Fireproof Design

The house in the above picture has just recently been completed for J. B. Bray, with the following construction: Foundation being laid up with paving brick, partition walls of the same material. All walls rest on good concrete footers. The main portion of building is of face brick backed up with hollow tile.

The roof, a Johns Manville product, is a high class asbestos shingle of the variegated type. All windows and doors are equipped with Chamberlain's weather stripping, eliminating all dust and rain, at the same time insulating the house on the outside against the cold and greatly reducing the fuel cost by keeping the warm air in. A building of the above construction is fireproof, making the insurance cost a minimum figure.

Born Brothers, are brick contractors and have built quite a number of brick dwellings and mercantile buildings here in the last few years. They have just completed the brick work on two houses for L. E. Adams on Forest-st and rain, at the same time insulating blvd of Spanish design.

Learn from Fido
And a Bed
Gardens by Proxy

BY EDNA B. DUTTON

IN spite of the weather, which, until the last few days, would lead one to think the temperature had been cornered by the coal dealers, the vacation spirit has kindled in the bosoms of some courageous few to the extent that they have taken to the asphalt and cement in quest of adventure and new sights. The crop of tourists this year has all the earmarks of being a replica of 1926 in regard to modes of transportation, hefty food orders and so forth. Some travel in an antiquated contraption, which looks as though it were just recovering from a severe scrimmage with the corn borer and others wax cheesy over a new car which they peer at surreptitiously in admiration from the restaurant window.

If you're a restaurant hound you're learned by this time to pick out the ones driving new cars and the ones who do not. The owners of the new ones sit near the window and fairly bask in the reflection of the shiny enamel of the new boat and if you and the family linger any length of time over the coffee cups you find yourself joining in spirit with the admiration party. If the conveyance happens to be of the vintage of ante-bellium days the owner gives more heed to his order, dallies longer and maintains the general attitude of not giving a hang if he went out and found some one had made away with it.

Tourists take more liberties than we home folk, in fact take more than they would at home and I have proof of it. The place where I park my napkin ring is one which lures a great many of the travelers and imagine if you can the surprise of the regulars recently when the door opened and in marched a collie dog carrying a small granite plate in his mouth. It wasn't his first visit to a restaurant either for he knew just what to do and before the rest of the party were seated the plate was deposited on the floor and he was ready to be served. For the next 20 minutes we were treated to a fine lesson in dinner etiquet.

The last I saw of the canine he was wending his way to an automobile with the carefully licked plate in his mouth, ready to continue the jaunt with his escort of a family of four. We might have been peeved if the dog hadn't been such a beauty and such a paragon of restaurant manners.

AND speaking of dogs, I wonder if you have provided your hound with the latest thing in solid comfort for the rest of his life, a real, honest-to-goodness dog bed? If not, surely the rest of your nights will be uncomfortable thinking how the poor brute is being mistreated to say nothing of trying to alibi the P. C. A. officer. Time was when an old coat answered the purpose of a bed and the pooch lucky enough to have an old comforter to rest on was the envy of the neighborhood, but them days is gone forever. The new dog bed is a woozy round mat, soft brushy surface, concave top, raised cushioned edge, comes in two shades of brown and may be had for the small sum of 5, 7, 9, 11, 13 and 15 dollars.

ASIDE from the thrill of possession, I believe we tourists on the hoof get as much pleasure out of the flower gardens as the owners. I have watched with keen interest this spring the progress of a number of gardens and have rejoiced I am sure almost as much as the owner, when the buds came and opened into flowers, to say nothing of being consumed with curiosity as to what will be the outcome of a number of tender plants set out for late fall bloom. I fully realize this latter statement puts me under suspicion for the rest of the summer but here's hoping no marauder takes advantage of it to get himself a nice bouquet for Sunday.

They are escorted to a dungeon by soldiers guarding the Gate of Burning and locked in. A message is whispered to Larry that a bar is hidden in the cushions of his couch with which they may escape. They use it but have to fight to freedom. Benna is again slightly wounded.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

"NOW, Grenfall, my friend," Omar was saying. "I had not meant to let you know, but I see it necessary. Come, I must hasten, and before I go I must have an answer to my question. You will forgive me for seeming rudeness I know. At the gate you called your companion "Little Flower." You would speak so only to a woman. Now, I have long suspected that Allal Abdi is no man, so answer me, for as Allah lives, the fate of Spain itself in Morocco may depend on what you say."

Before Larry could speak, Benna herself replied.

"Do not make him tell a lie, Omar ben Medjad. He has pledged his word and will carry through to the end. I will answer for him. Truly, I am a woman."

To Larry's surprise, Omar ben Medjad was affected strangely and mightily. His throat worked and his face went dead-white in the darkness beneath the trees. His breath for the moment, came in gasps.

After a time, seemingly by great effort and sheer will power, he recovered some measure of his composure, then did a strange thing. Walking quickly to where Benna lay beneath the tree, he dropped to his knees beside her and looked curiously into her eyes; finally, he picked up her slender, bronzed hand and lifted it gently to his face, bowing his forehead against it silently. After a little he looked up at Larry.

"I am sorry, Grenfall, and I am glad. The whole course of our future plans must be changed from this moment as they regard restoring a certain person to the throne of the Seven Tribes. All else must go through as we planned, save that it now becomes necessary to find another true sherif of the blood." He turned again to the girl, looking into her velvety eyes.

"A woman may not rule the Berbers, as you know, and our plans are too great, the future of Morocco too precious to permit of the risk that would attend you ascending the tribal throne guised as a man. You will not mind losing this great chance?"

Larry, listening for Benna's reply, was grateful from the depths of his heart for Omar's words to the girl, for they relieved him of a burden that was likely to bear him down under its very weight of sorrow. The obstacle that had stood like a stone wall between himself and this dream-girl was now removed, completely and finally. Never again would it be built up and he was free now to worship at her feet once again, and not hide the fact that he did worship; he was free now to claim what she had to offer, and so unmistakably had shown him she did of fer. He heard the girl's low-voiced response:

"I do not mind, Omar. I am glad, more so than I can say. I did not want the tribal throne, but all my life I have been schooled to believe that I must take it, all my life I have been taught that on my acceptance and carrying out of the great pretense depended the whole future of the Seven Tribes of the Berbers and—and—I was ready to renounce it anyhow, for something greater than a tribal throne, Omar, my friend, has entered my life, and the rulership of the Berbers seemed about to cost my life's happiness."

"It is well," said Omar, and stooping gently he touched the girl's smooth forehead with his bearded lips, then rising he walked quickly to Larry. His hand went out and he grasped the American's, gripping it firmly.

"You love her, too, Grenfall?" His voice was low—too low for the girl to hear.

"Better than I love my life," Larry replied, huskily. The other's grip on his hand tightened.

"I see now where both of you were renouncing love for a thing you each thought greater than your own happiness. Allah be praised that I learned of this—that you called to her in a moment of forgetfulness at the Gate of the Burning. She must continue on with you, my friend, to the very end, for it is too late now for either of you to turn back. But from now on she travels simply as your assistant—there must be no further thought from either of you that she will ascend to rulership over the Berbers. Another shall be found, whom you shall both know in good time. Now, care for her, Grenfall, and love her deeply, for it is in the Berber blood to return love for love. I shall praise Allah forever that, since she is a woman, it is you, my old and dearest friend, who has won her heart. Now, I go. Hasten with the dawn to the hut of the Marabout of Adrar."

There was something about the voice of Omar ben Medjad that had a familiar ring to Larry's ears and, gripping the other's hand, he looked keenly into his face. Of a certainty he saw there a marked resemblance to a man he knew to be dead. On the impulse of the moment, he asked:

"What relationship was Ben Mansour to you, Omar?"

The other drew his hand swiftly and re-arranged his beard, gave a new twist to his face; Larry looked into the countenance of the kaid el mia. He heard the kaid's voice speaking:

"When Allah wills, the answer to your question shall be revealed to you. Now, I leave a packet of food," and with the words he vanished into the gloom of the forest.

Without words, but with his heart overflowing under his emotion Larry went to Benna and knelt down. Silently he extended his arms allowing one of them to creep beneath her. He felt her give to his eager clasp then knew that her arms, bare and gleaming white where her burnouse fell back from them, were about his neck. Once again, after what seemed to him to have been a thousand years, he felt the hot, vivid contact of her lips on his; felt that subtle, all-surrendering yield of her body.

After a little he drew back slightly, gazing deep into her starry eyes.

"You know now, Little White Flower, why I lied to you, back there by the fire?"

Low and sweet, her bell-like tones dropped on his ears like flakes plucked from a colorful Moroccon dawn:

"You thought my only ambition in life was to ascend to a tribal throne, and that if you demanded my love, I might give up my ambitions for your sake. Is not that it, Larry?"

"I thought, too, that to be instrumental in keeping you from your blood heritage would be craven of me," he whispered softly, "and I was ready to bury my own feelings forever to insure the success of your future, dearest."

She repeated the last word softly.

Insect Life

Love's Embers

A Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

IT was not a particularly easy task to fit words to my mental picture of the young man with the wolfhound who had just gone through the gates to the train shed, his movements obviously trailed by our queer red-bearded neighbor. I had discarded the word "dapper," which first had risen to my lips, because that word is invariably associated in my mind with little men, and the proportions of the young man were as magnificent as those of the dog whose strength and energy were so engrossing him.

Not exactly realizing why I did so, I found myself noting the items of his appearance and filing them away in the card index of my memory. That he was in his late twenties, I was sure, although the black, heavy, close-clipped mustache which he affected might have been responsible for an extra year or two in appearance. For the rest, he was tall, broad-shouldered, narrow-waisted and long-limbed, with an erectness and carriage that betrayed rigid military training, and a poise and manner which spoke as eloquently of gentle breeding as did his meticulous grooming and his cultured intonations.

Dark-eyed, dark-haired, with an expressive, engaging countenance, I made the amused comment to myself that there would be much fluttering of the queer organs modern girls dub their hearts in whatever eastern Long Island village the lordly youth had chosen as his destination.

The train announcer sounded his last raucous call, the gates to the Montauk train clanged shut, and I realized that my vigil was over, leaving me two bits of information for my pondering. The red-bearded man had traveled a hundred miles that morning for the purpose of going back again a half hour later, and the object of his quest appeared to be the tall youth after whom he had scuttled like a great crab as soon as he caught sight of him.

My mental card index, with a little impatience, was closing.

I locked away that compartment of tuition that the time would not be long before I should open it again. For the present, however, I had more important things to occupy my attention.

A glance at my watch and a swift calculation told me that I would be unable to go up to Lillian's hotel before my appointment with Mr. Veritsen, but that I would have ample time to telephone her, and I immediately arose and made my way to the telephone booth.

At the sound of my voice Lillian's exploded into the excited tones which she permits herself when she does not have to be on guard. No one knew better than I that she was not really excited at all, and that to a voice she did not recognize her tone would have been absolutely devoid of surprise or any other emotion. But it was amusing and pleasing to hear her voluble comment.

"For amputating the third toe of the ai!" he ejaculted, "what good wind blows you in at this time of the morning. Hevings, cheild, you must have taken that earliest train, designed, I am sure, by a descendant of a Spanish Inquisitor. Aren't you starved! Come right on up and I'll throw some breakfast together upon my trusty grill."

"No, you don't. Thanks so much, just the same." I retorted laughing. "Katie stuffed me as if I were a Strasbourg goose just before I started, and it is simply impossible for me to eat another mouthful."

"But you're coming up, anyway, aren't you?" she demanded, impatiently.

"Not for a while," I told her. "I have an engagement with Mr. Vertisen at his offices at 11 o'clock."

"Phil Veritsen?" she interrupted. "Why, the man's in Europe, or was the last I heard of him. When did he get back?"

"He didn't," I returned, laughing to cover up an inexplicable confusion which embarrassed and infuriated me. "Or at least he didn't until a few minutes ago. His ship is just in this morning, or something like that. He wirelessed me that he would be in this morning and that he had some new discoveries about which he must consult me as soon as he landed. Hence the 11 o'clock appointment."

TENTH ANNUAL OUTING OF ERIE IS SCHEDULED

Date of Yearly Picnic Changed; To Be Held on Hudson River

The Tenth Annual Outing of the employes of every division of the Erie Railroad is scheduled for Saturday, July 30, at Indian Point, on the Hudson River, it was announced today. The excursion and outing was formerly to be held the latter part of June but a change in date has ben announced.

The picnic begins early Saturday with games, including a sack race, three-legged race, relay and other contests. A picnic dinner and general get-together is scheduled for noon and afternoon.

Last year 985 persons attended the outing and excursion. More than 1,000 are expected this summer.

The committee on arrangements are men prominent in Erie Railroad circles and special efforts are being made to make the annual affair the greatest ever this year.

A photo showing the fourth monthly meeting of the Marion Erie Supervisor's Club, held in the ball room of the Harding Hotel here, is reproduced in the current issue of the Erie Magazine. The picture was taken by Adam Bauer of this city.

About 80 persons were present at the meeting, which was held a short time ago. The principal speaker was Jesse H. Mason, superintendent of the Marion public schools, his subject being "Friendship." Short addresses also were made by C. K. Scott, division engineer; Dale H. Gorman, car distributor; Mrs. W. H. Phler and Mrs. A. N. Grimes.

The committee of arrangements on this occasion consisted of A. L. Conrad, agent of the Marion Transfer; C. A. Mertaugh, assistant division engineer; R. J. Maskill, car foreman.

Picture Shown

A photo of Edward Kavanaugh, locomotive engineer on the second district of the Kent Division of the Erie, who was fatally injured at Dayton a few weeks ago when he stepped from his cab in front of an eastbound train on the Big Four Railroad on an adjoining track, is also shown in the June issue of the magazine.

Mr. Kavanaugh was very active in railroad matters and for a number of years was chief of the local division of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

HICKMAN AND VARGO PAY DEATH PENALTY

Both Men Go Calmly to Electric Chair in Ohio Penitentiary

Columbus, June 11—Relatives today were to claim the bodies of two Ohio murderers who expiated their crimes with their lives in the electric chair at Ohio State Penitetniary last night.

John Hickman, formerly of Columbus, went to the chair at 9:03 o'clock for slaying Dan Garrett, a Chillicothe policeman, and George Vargo, a Cleveland Hungarian, died a quarter of an hour later, for killing Mrs. Katherine Sabo, his landlady.

Both men went calmly to death, Hickman merely expressing the hope that he would meet Prison Chaplain Reed "in heaven." Vargo displayed the same atoicism which marked his demeanor throughout his trial and conviction, making no statement, but gazing calmly about the new "death house" at the prison, as guards adjusted the straps which bound him to the chair.

Hickman professed religion and was baptised before his execution. Vargo also spent several hours in conference with a Hungarian minister yesterday.

A third man, Philip Orleck, convicted of killing a guard at the Mansfield Reformatory, and scheduled to die with Hickman and Vargo, was reprieved by a decision of the supreme court this week to review his conviction.

Emanuel Lutheran Church Has Same Pastor 18 Years

History of Congregation Dates Back to Beginning of Marion

When the first settlers came to Marion County shortly after 1820 among them were German Lutherans. They were deeply religious people and they brought their church with them from the fatherland. Thus when Marion was still in swaddling clothes German Lutheran pastors were here ministering to the people of their language and faith. In 1841 Rev. J. Van Linger was conducting German services in the old courthouse. In 1843 Rev. Schladermund built the old brick church on N. State-st. For many years this church was the home of the Lutheran congregation in this city. It has since passed through many hands, is still in a good state of repair, and is now serving as a house of worship for the Seventh Day Adventists.

German Services

During the first half century the Lutheran church in our city was entirely German. Then some of the members felt that the welfare of the church demanded a change to the language of the American people. Since the introduction of English services was stubbornly resisted by the old congregation, a secession occurred. In 1874 five members withdrew and organized a new congregation. That was the beginning of Emanuel's congregation. The new organization was chartered by the state legislature as "The Evangelical Lutheran Emanuel's Congregation of Marion Ohio." The express purpose for which this congregation was organized was, that the Lutheran faith might be preached in this city in the English language.

Church Built

After worshipping in rented quarters for a decade, Rev. M. C. Hecht, the first pastor and real father of the congregation, built the brick church on the corner of State and Columbia-sts. This church was dedicated in 1886, and served the congregation as a house of worship for 32 years.

In 1891 Rev. A. L. Nicklas became pastor. During his pastorate, which lasted five years, the old parsonage on Cherry-st was built. It served as a parsonage for 33 years.

Rev. J. W. Schillinger

In 1896 Rev. E. F. W. Stellhorn became the pastor. His pastorate lasted 13 years, and during this time the congregation enjoyed healthy and substantial growth.

Pastor 18 Years

In 1909 Rev. J. W. Schillinger became the pastor. His pastorate has already covered 18 years, and he enjoys the distinction of being the veteran of all pastors in Marion. In 1916 the building of the new church on S. Prospect-st was undertaken. The church was dedicated on the Sept. 8, 1918. The new parsonage next to the church was built in 1925.

Emanuel's Lutheran Church stands for conservative Christianity. It accepts the whole Bible as the inspired Word of God. It believes in the verbal inspiration of the Holy Scriptures; yea every "jot and tittle," as the Savior said, of the Bible is inspired by the Holy Spirit. It believes that the Bible, being the infallible and inerrant truth of God, is the only means to regenerate and save the world. Hence it binds its pastors to confine themselves entirely to the preaching of the Word of God. The teaching of the Word of God to the children is a very important part of its work. Besides the Sunday School, it conducts the Saturday religious school, and the regular catechism classes for the instruction of children.

Vacation Bible School

BY REV. GEORGE E. GROVES
Pastor Central Christian Church.

A SERMONETTE

"One of the institutions that has appeared in the field of religious education during the last ten years is the Daily Vacation Bible School." Like the Sunday School that was started by Robert Rakes more than a century ago, it is sponsored by the membership of our churches and seems to have a definite place in our modern educational system. Its purpose is to supplement the teaching of the Bible that is being done in the home, the Sunday School, and to a limited extent in the public schools.

In our own city at the present time six of these schools are being conducted, in as many different districts by a staff of 18 teachers and 12 assistants all of which are under the supervision of a director. During the four weeks in which the schools will be in session 60 hours will be given to religious instruction, worship, and memory work. Five hundred children are enrolled ranging in age from six to thirteen.

These schools that are being carried on in every section of our country have many commendable features. In many cases as much definite teaching is done in this period of four or six weeks as is done through the whole year in the Sunday School, they stimulate attendance and interest in the whole church program, they train the child at the most impressionable period of his life; and they cultivate christian unity by enlisting the various religious forces in a common community task.

From many quarters the fear is being expressed that our religious education is not keeping pace with the secular. That in this materialistic age we are forgetting God and neglecting the things of the spirit. Statements like the following from the Wall Street Journal are typical: "What America needs is a revival of religion- the kind that father and mother used to have—religion that counted it good business to stop for daily prayers before breakfast right in the middle of the harvest, that quit work in the field a half hour early on Wednesday night, so that they might go to prayer meeting. That's what we need now in this country to clean it of its filth of graft and greed. We are worshiping what decaying nations fell down and worshiped before their light went out."

The religious training of our boys and girls in this changing, money grabbing, pleasure-hunting age should be the supreme concern of every person in the community. The Daily Vacation Bible School is one of the means to that end.

Rev. George E. Groves,
Pastor of Central Christian Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Ayres were married April 11, 1916, and have three children ranging in age from eight to three years.

The last time this occurred, Mrs. Ayres sets forth, she knocked the door down, obtained her possessions and went to live with relatives.

An affidavit of poverty was filed with the petition.

Four Dollars Is Payment For Nearly Month's Board

THE note, neatly written in brown ink, read as follows: "Enclosed you will find four dollars to pay for my board for three weeks and six days including parts of March and April."

Cyrene Langdon, Prospect, who received the message, accepted the payment as being in full and according to agreement, considering himself well paid.

In April 1927, four dollars for slightly less than a month's board would be adequate cause for legal action but the date on this particular message was April 28, 1859.

Twentieth century methods were unknown in Prospect in the days of Cyrene Landon's experience at "keeping boarders," it is plainly seen from the note's contents. The term "board" is construed to mean the well known "three squares, a place to 'flop' and washin' and ironin'", according to Pearl Sells, 148 Vine-st, who is in possession of the note.

No Stamp, Envelope

Cyrene Landon was the father of Mrs. Elizabeth Sells, wife of Peter Sells and it was among her papers that the note was found. S. L. Landon, Cyrene's brother, was the "boarder" and because his day was before that of the postage stamp and the envelope, he folded his letter in a clever manner so that it would hold the four dollars, sealed it and made a deposit with the postal department for its transportation.

Among other interesting things among Mrs. Sells' papers, her son, Pearl, stated are several church receipts passed out among members of the congregation on quarterly settlement day upon payment of church dues. The receipt was a very important instrument to the church goers for without it they were denied the right of attending services.

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETE FOR VISIT TO TOMB

Circus Troupe Will Place Wreath There; Band Will Play Hymn

All arrangements have been completed for the ceremony Sunday afternoon at the Harding Tomb where virtually every member of the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus personnel will go to pay tribute to the late President and Mrs. Harding.

While it is expected that several thousand Marion persons and visitors from other cities will be present, the ceremony is primarily for members of the circus and as the show will be idle Sunday it will give executives and performers an opportunity to visit the tomb and stage the ceremonies in an impressive manner.

Arrangements have been made through the courtesy of the Marion Automobile Club to have 30 automobiles at the Harding Hotel at 1:30 p. m. to transport the members of the concert band and circus folk to the cemetery.

The procession will halt in front of the gates and the line of march will form in the cemetery directly in front of Supt. E. A. Sloan's office, headed by Professor Woeckener's band.

Will Play Hymn

From there to the tomb the band will play a dirge while behind will be the circus people.

At the tomb the band will play "Lead Kindly Light," President Harding's favorite hymn, and will follow with "Perfect Day," which was Mrs. Harding's favorite composition.

At the close, C. D. Odom, manager of the circus, will place a wreath of chrysanthemums at the foot of the caskets and Rev. U. S. Davis, pastor of Trinity Baptist Church, will deliver a brief sermon to be followed by a prayer.

The ceremonies will close with the concert band playing "Nearer My God to Thee."

The automobiles will leave the Harding Hotel at 1:30 p. m. and the line of march will form in the cemetery at 2 p. m. It is expected that the entire ritual will be completed by 2:45 p. m.

BAR AUTOS FROM CEMETERY SUNDAY

Members of the Marion Cemetery Association, Supt. E. A. Sloan and Lieut. W. L. Sherfey are cooperating with the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus to have the ceremonies at the tomb conducted with the least possible inconvenience.

In order to accomodate the personnel of the circus and the several thousand visitors who are expected to be present the gates of the cemetery will be opened, but for pedestrians only.

No automobiles will be permitted to enter the cemetery and motorists are requested to park their automobiles away from the cemetery gates.

LEGION INSURANCE OFFICE OPENED ON CENTER-ST

Special Service Offered to World War Veterans by Local Post

Members of the American Legion this morning expressed themselves as very well pleased with the results following the opening on last night of an office for the purpose of assisting ex-service men in the taking out of government insurance. According to members of the legion, more than $6,000 insurance was written.

The office, which has been opened in the room formerly occupied by the Western Union Telegraph company on E. Center-st, will be open each night, except Sunday, until July 2, the date fixed by the government, for the closing of the insurance opportunity to ex-service men.

Three local insurance men were in charge of the office last night and it is the plan of the legion to have an experienced insurance man at the office each night. It was pointed out by legion men this morning that the office for the selling of the insurance was purely a service to ex-service men and in no way did any person other than the person taking out the insurance, receive any benefit.

In addition to assisting the ex-soldiers in taking out government insurance, ex-service men will also assist their comrades in any other problems that they might have in the way of adjusted compensation.

UNIDENTIFIED NEGRO IS CRUSHED IN COAL CAR

Sliding Railroad Ties Cause of Fatal Accident in Erie Yards

An unidentified negro, said to be about 45 years of age, died at 3 o'clock this morning in the M. H. Glunder invalid car while enroute to City Hospital, of injuries sustained early this morning when he was crushed beneath several railroad ties in a steel coal car switching in the Erie yards. The accident occurred on the eastbound hump.

Officials of the Erie, who discovered the man, summoned the ambulance. Death came before the arrival of a physican.

It was thought the man was "bumming" his way and was sleeping in the car which was loaded with ties, for the night. The jar of switching on the hump caused the ties to slide, crushing him about the chest.

No means of identification were found other than a Catholic prayer book in his pocket with the address "Amelia Jree, 330 W. Circle-st, Springfield, O." on the flyleaf, a bus ticket that had been purchased in Hamilton, O., and a savings book on the Citizens Savings Bank and Trust Co. of Hamilton with an item for a small sum owed to one "Crawford", marked paid. He was neatly dressed in clothes in good condition and carried a shaving outfit and extra clothing with him, some small change amounting to $1.20 and a bunch of keys. He wore overalls over his suit, and was believed by Mr. Gunder to have been employed as a jointor, possibly in Hamilton. He was 5 ft. 7 inches tall and weighed about 130 pounds.

The case was turned over to the police and inquiries forwarded to Hamilton and Springfield. Funeral arrangements are pending the arrival of word from those cities.

INVESTIGATE CLAIM MAN SWAM ENGLISH CHANNEL

Accomplished Feat in 10 Hours and 45 Minutes, He Tells Legation

Paris, June 11—Careful investigations being made today of the claim of Venceslas Spacek, that he swam the English Channel from Wissant to Dover on Thursday in the record time of 10 hours and 45 minutes.

The Czecho-Slovak legation announced that it has not yet confirmed the claim of Spacek and it is endeavoring to communicate with Doctor Riha of the Czecho-Slovakian ministry of health, whom Spacek says was at Calais when he made the swim.

Spacek arrived in Paris late Thursday night from Calais. Today he went to the legation and collected money sent to him by his family but the officials had no authorization to pay him the $6,000 prize offered by the Czecho-Slovakian ministry of health for a record breaking channel swim.

At the Hotel Du Sauvage in Calais today the International News Service was informed that Spacek had arrived there on Tuesday and had spent most of his time in his room until he went to the station to meet a Czecho-Slovakian official who did not arrive. The hotel authorities said Spacek took a 7:30 o'clock train from Calais for Paris on Thursday night.

Caravan Will Come Here in Early Hours from Massillon, Ohio

If you have never smelled lucious wheat cakes and steaming coffee in the cook tent of the circus, visit the Drake Lot Sunday morning when the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus arrives from Massillon for its Monday afternoon and evening performances here.

Sulky City Racing Association Holds Meeting; Many Entries

MEMBERS of the Sulky City Racing Association met last night to "talk things over" and complete arrangements for the annual Marion Ohio Short Ship Circuit racing meeting, which opens here Tuesday, June 21, and continues through the following Friday.

The association has made big preparations for the races. It has received word from many of the greatest trainers throughout the country to the effect that they will bring their horses here for the meet.

Famous Drivers

Among the famous drivers who will be here are Palin, Fleming, Morrison, Perry, Erskine, Mallam, Egan, Lacy, Cartmail, Valentine, Edman, Gray, Morrow and many others. These drivers with their horses will race here and ship direct from this city to Akron for the opening of the Grand Circuit the following week.

Never before has Marion had such an array of famous drivers and horses on the local track as they will have this season. Some of the horses entered here are entered in the $20,000 stakes at Toledo and the $25,000 at Kalamazoo, Mich.

There will be a total of about 200 horses in the Marion stables, coming from almost every state in the union as well as from Canada.

The program has been so arranged that every day will be a banner day.

"Sulky City"

It must be remembered that Marion is the "Sulky City" of the world. Horsemen are anxious to come here to visit the sulky factories as well as to enter the races. Hotels already are receiving requests for reservations for the week of June 20 and it is expected that Marion will be the mecca for the greatest and most famous horsemen of the world.

Entries for the purse races close Monday, it was announced today. Entries for one $1,000 stake race, the 2:18 trot, to be held Wednesday of the racing week, are closed. There will be a total of 14 races during the four-day meet.

HELEN WILLS WINS

Defeats Mrs. L. A. Godfree in Finals of Kent County Meet

Rochester, Kent, England, June 11—Miss Helen Wills today won the Kent County Ladies' Tennis Championships, defeating Mrs. L. A. Godfree, the former Kitty McKane, 6-2, 6-4.

This is the first time that Miss Wills has ever defeated Mrs. Godfree on English soil, and augurs well for the American girl's success at Wimbledon.

Detroit Clowns to Invade Lincoln Park Here Sunday

THE Detroit Clowns, professional comedians as well as professional baseball players, will invade Lincoln Park Sunday afternoon for a game with the Marion Athletics.

Under the management of Harry Howlett, the Clowns have been winning the majority of their games since the date of their organization in 1914. They dress in clown suits and wear grease paint — but that doesn't affect their playing.

Best of Season

The Clowns are without a doubt the best club to appear here this season and the Athletics are ready for them. The Marion crew has been putting in some tough practice sessions and should perform in their old style Sunday.

The local club played a good game against the Elyria Richwines in the field but had hard luck with the stick. Batting practice this week is expected to reap its benefits Sunday afternoon. Main will be on the mound with Dick Brashares on the receiving end.

The visitors will combine fun with baseball playing and provide entertainment for alk It's the first appearance of the boys here and one of the largest crowds of the season is expected to be on hand for the contest.

Marion's Record

Marion has won three and lost two of its games so far this season and never expects to get as low as the .500 mark. It took the first three games with ease, but lost the last two to Olds Motors of Toledo, and the Elyria Richwines, respectively. Errors were responsible for the Olds defeat but the locals showed marked improvement in their fielding last week and should play air-tight ball Sunday.

The Clowns carry a troup of 12 funsters, "all Nick Altrock," and probably will have Eddie Cicotte, famous "Black Sox" pitcher with them. Last week they lost their first game so far this season, tasting defeat at the hands of the famous General Tires of Akron, one of the best semi-pro clubs in the state. The score was 6 to 5.

Everything points to an exhibition of baseball playing as well as fun making at Lincoln park Sunday. The game will be called at 2:30 with E. C. Meckau umpiring.

Connie Mack's Athletics Again Head Pennantward

NEW YORK, June 11—The Philadelphia Athletics, who started the season like champions only to fall into a disastrous slump, are again making a strong bid for the American League pennant. A new lineup worked wonders, and to date they have won five straight. Connie Mack benched Branom, his million-dollar first baseman, for playing tenpercent ball, and gave the job to Fox, a catcher. Old Buck Wheat got Lamar's job in left field. Jimmy Dykes replaced Hale at third, and Cy Perkins was given more work behind the bat. Ty Cobb, whose homer enabled the team to trim the Browns yesterday, 4 to 3, is the spark plug of the outfit, and Eddie Collins has improved his batting average considerably.

The race tightened a bit when the White Sox downed the Yankees, 4 to 2. Ted Lyons winning his eighth straight victory.

Detroit put on another big rally, scoring five runs in the twelfth, and routed the Red Sox 10 to 5. The Tigers jumped all the way to fifth place and have won three games in succession for the first time this season.

Speaker's double and Reeves' single in the thirteenth enabled Washington to nose out Cleveland, 6 to 5.

Donie Bush, manager of the Pirates, is thinking of dragging all of his unmarried players to the altar. His outfielder, Paul Waner, shortly before getting married last night, made three hits and led the Pirates to a 13 to 4 victory over the Giants.

Cubs Take Another

The Cubs took another close one from Brooklyn, winning in the twelfth 5 to 4. Flowers, Brooklyn shortstop, was benched.

The astounding Braves polished off the Cardinals again in the tenth, 11 to 8, after Frisch's homer with two on had tied the score in the ninth.

Cincinnati actually won a series, plastering the Phillies 9 to 3. The Phils dropped to seventh place.

MANSFIELD RACING MEET OPENS WEDNESDAY

One Hundred and Fifty-Seven Entries Ready To Go

One hundred and fifty-seven entries have been received by the Mansfield Driving Club for the Ohio Short Ship racing meet which is scheduled to get under way in that city Monday and continue through Friday.

Promise of the greatest meet ever held in Mansfield is given those in charge of the affair. The first four days will be devoted to the regular races and Friday will see some special events.

The races are to be called at 1:30 and start at 2 o'clock each day.

BINCOS NOT BOOKED FOR LEAGUE CONTEST

Only Two Games in Tri-County League Over Week-End

The Marion Bincos are not scheduled for a Tri-County League game over the coming week-end but Morral is booked to tie up with Claridon on the latter's grounds and Agosta is billed to journey to Somerville for a tilt Sunday.

Should Morral defeat Claridon, it will be leading the league, having already won one clash and suffered no defeats. The Bincos also have won one and lost none. It took the Bincos 13 innings to down Claridon and it is an established fact that Morral will have no easy time copping the game, if they succeed in accomplishing the feat.

Somerville lost to Morral last week but is all set to go give Agosta a battle Sunday. Agosta has not yet played a league game and little is known concerning its strength.

The Bincos will play Morral at Morral next Sunday.

He pitched and played first base in baseball, fullback in football, center in basketball and threw the discus in track.

Big Ten Athletes "Doped" To Win National Tourney

CHICAGO, June 11 - Unless those highly tuned track and field athletes of the Big Ten Conference have developed the rickets se corn on the soles of their feet over night they should ramble away this afternoon with the bulk of the individual titles in the sixth annual national intercollegiate meet which is now in progress at Soldiers' Field here.

Amos Alonzo Stagg and his brother collegians yesterday sifted more than 400 aces and nondescrips down to a good representation of the upper classes and these men will battle it out for the prize this afternoon.

Merry Time

The Big Ten boys had a merry time in the prelims. They qualified for 21 places in the discus and hammer throws and all the dash events, the pole vault, the mile, two mile, the high and running broad jumps were moved right in as final events and all the original entrants will have a chance to nip off the gold medals from scratch in today's jamboree.

The East, represented largely by the University of Pittsburgh, Geneva College of Beaver Falls, Pa., and New Hampshire, checked in with qualifiers. The Southwest moved in seven men. The Interstate Conference of the Middle West, the Missouri Valley, the Far West and the Rocky Mountain section were held up by scattering qualifiers and ranked in the order named.

MELLETT PROBE SHIFTS TODAY TO MANSFIELD

Louis Mazer Awaits Removal to Ohio Pen After Five-to-20 Year Sentence

Canton, June 11—The scene of the Don R. Mellett murder probe shifted temporarily from Canton today, as Prosecutor Henry W. Harter, Jr., left for Mansfield, where he was to meet Ora Slater, Cincinnati detective.

A witness who is reported to be able to furnish valuable information in the murder investigation, will be interviewed, it was said. Although Prosecutor Harter declared the witness is not an inmate of Mansfield Reformatory, he declined to divulge the man's identity or tell what he and Slater expect to learn.

Even after the case of Seranus A. Lengel, ousted police chief, who is awaiting arraignment Monday on an indictment charging first degree murder in connection with the Mellett assassination, is completed, the probe will not have ended, it was announced.

Not to Cease Work

"We will not cease our activities one bit until the whole mystery is cleared up and every man who had a hand in the plot to murder Don Mellett is punished," Prosecutor Harter said today, before leaving for Mansfield.

Lengel, it was learned today, probably will plead indigency when he is arraigned Monday and ask the court to appoint lawyers to defend him as did Floyd Streitenberger, the third man to be convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary for life for Mellett's slaying here last July.

Mazer Sentenced

Louis Mazer still was in Stark County Jail here today, awaiting removal to Ohio State Penitentiary in Columbus where he is to spend from five to 20 years. Mazer pleaded guilty to manslaughter, one of the charges against him in his first degree murder indictment, before Judge Agler late yesterday.

The first of the conspirators to be charged with murder and the first to confess, Mazer has been in Canton jails since his arrest last September. His confession resulted in the conviction of Floyd Streitenberger, ex-deetive, and the ultimate indictment of Lengel.

SEA MONSTER
Creature, which has baffled scientific authorities was captured after a thirty-nine-hour battle by Captain Thompson off Knight's Key. Five harpoon trusts and 151 large calibre rifle bullets only served to increase the fury of the monster and, at open sea, it dragged a small boat containing three men at express-train speed for hundreds of miles.
WHAT IS IT?
The creature is not classified in natural history, but it is the largest specimen of the fish tribe ever seen or captured. It is neither whale nor shark.
Scientific authorities believe the creature was an inhabitant of depths of more than 1,500 feet under surface of the ocean and was blown up by some subterranean or volcanic upheaval which injured its diving apparatus so that it was unable to return to its native haunts.

are you?" demanded Peter. underneath you. I sank a hole!"

didn't you tell me you were " asked the Boy.

se I didn't know it myself," Matty. "You remember I we had come to the broad Well, I miscalculated a bit. f tunnelling down to a level road I broke through the side. no distance at all. You are on the edge now. Slide down, can't you?"

earing Matty's voice once more Peter's fear again left him, and now he was able to see more clearly, and sure enough, bending over, he glimpsed below him, in what seemed to be another trench, a dim form that must be Matty. He tried to slide down the slanting tunnel just as Mole had told him to, but it was too narrow to sit down in and there was nothing to hang on to, so somehow he lost his footing and tumbled down head first. He was not hurt a bit, and when he scrambled to his feet by his friend he found himself standing in a tunnel that, not any lighter than the first one had been, was yet hard and smooth under foot and wide and high enough for him to stretch in.

"Ah, this is fine," said he, and raised his arms as far as they would go above his head and stamped his feet. Matty chuckled with pleasure.

"Glad you like it," said he. "This is the widest street in Moledom and it leads straight through the city. It would never do for all the Moles to build their houses upon it—they could be reached too easily by the enemy—but they all have private paths leading to it. Quite a piece of engineering it was to build this highway through the ground. None but natural born miners could possibly have done it. But you must see our fortresses if you want to see really wonderful pieces of architecture. It takes a strong foe to harm us there."

STOCKS REACTIONARY IN HALF-DAY SESSION

Oil Shares Show Especial Weakness; Hudson Motors in Last-Minute Rally

MARKETS AT A GLANCE:

Railroad stocks, irregular; industrial stocks, irregular; domestic bonds, dull; foreign bonds, fairly steady; grain, firm; copper, irregular; oil, irregular; cotton, steady; rubber, irregular; sugar, fairly steady; pig iron, firm; foreign exchange, firm.

New York, June 11—In the half session of the stock market preceding the double holiday today, the bulk of industrial stocks displayed a heavy and reactionary tone. Speculative interest was confined mostly to the professionals.

Special weakness was in evidence in the so-called oil-lands stocks. Texas Land Trust dropped back to below 29, two points below Friday's close. Transcontinental oil was also on the selling counter.

Selling pressure on the speculative leaders, including General Motors, Reading, Baldwin and other well-known shares, was sufficient to depress prices a point or two. The "merger rails," Western Maryland, Wabash and Missouri Pacific, also sold off 2 to 3 points in a quiet market, in which absence of buying power was a more important factor than urgent liquidation. There were a few exceptions to the rule, American Can's new advance to 54 being the most important.

Speculative "evening up" was in evidence in the commodity market, though the Monday shut-down will not be on as large as in the security markets. The New York cotton and rubber exchanges will close at noon, and the produce exchanges will be open all day. Corn sold fractionally higher, after Friday's heavy decline, and cotton gained a few points.

Sharp declines in the pool stocks and speculative industrials took place near the close of the market. A 5-point drop in Pierce Arrow preferred to 61 followed rumors of the possible discontinuance of the 8 per cent. dividend. A. M. Byers declined to 80, completing a loss of about 14 points from the high of the week.

Though the better grade of industrial and mercantile stocks displayed a firm tone in this period, there were no corresponding advances in the speculative favorites, and the market lost ground. Hudson Motors was a feature of the final period, with a sharp recovery to above 85.

DE AUTREMONT TWINS GOING BACK TO OREGON

Admit Identity, but Deny They Had Part in Crimes Charged to Them

Columbus, June 11—Calmly admitting their identity but emphatically denying that they had any part in the crimes with which they are charged, Ray and Roy De Autremont, twin brothers, 27, were in county jail here today awaiting the arrival of deputy sheriffs who are enroute from Jacksonville, Ore., to take them back to face charges of murder and dynamiting a mail train.

"It would have been better if we had stayed and faced the music," declared Ray De Autremont, while maintaining that he and his brother were innocent. They were brought here late yesterday by department of justice officials, following their arraignment on federal charges of robbing the mails at Steubenville, where they have been in hiding for a year.

Both the De Autremonts are diminutive of stature, and they had made elaborate efforts to conceal their true identity, Ray by bleaching his hair, and Roy by growing a moustache. They have worked in coal mines, steel mills and other industrial enterprises while in hiding in Ohio during the past year, they said.

A dramatic parting between Ray De Autremont and his wife and year-old baby occurred after their arraignment in the Steubenville courtroom late yesterday. The young woman, who married De Autremont under the name of Elmer Goodwin, and never suspected until his arrest this week that his real name was De Autremont and that he had been the object of nationwide search for four years, simply said "Goodbye" and fell swooning into a courtroom chair, when the brothers were led out by a deputy U. S. marshal. She will return with her baby to her former home at Hanging Rock, O.

MARMON

Leads the World in Motor Car Value

For the MOST in Value at $1485 — —Buy this Nash!

Search as you may among cars selling for or around this price. Nowhere else will $1485 buy such VALUE, such costly, LUXURIOUS quality.

NONE have the style. NONE have such high character in finish and fittings.

Step into the front seat and SEE the luxury. A costly walnut effect on the instrument board before you, on the door panels beside and behind you.

Choice Mohair Velvet upholstery all around, cushioned deeply on the seats, tailored smartly on the side walls.

And when it comes to performance, NOT ONE comes even NEAR this spirited Nash. There is absolutely no comparison!

Step on the starter, then on the accelerator—and GO! The soft even flow of power is due to the ultra-modern crankshaft. It has 7 main bearings—three or four MORE than most other cars. A bearing at every possible place to hold the shaft firm and rigid.

It has BIGGER bearings too—wider and stronger ones. MORE bearing surface than any other Six in its price class.

Try a long steep hill and feel the EXTRA power. Nash straight-line drive sends the power DIRECT from motor to rear axle—no energy wasted by angles or curves along its route.

Bring in your old car as part payment on a new Special Sedan. Among fine sedans at this price, there's nothing to equal this Nash. Come in—TODAY—endeed.

The Nash price range on 26 different models extends from $985 to $2050, f. o. b. factory

REMEMBER WHEN shifting traffic got so monotonous and finding a place to park was half a morning's task?

the little MARMON 8

Companion to the large Marmon 8

There wouldn't be any traffic problem — if all cars were like this

If every car moved off instantly at the go signal, and there were no sluggards

—if every car could edge into a parking space with only a foot to spare —doesn't it seem rather logical that traffic would be quite a different sort of thing?

Even now, when the little Marmon 8 type of car is quite a unique thing, owners are concerning themselves less and less over difficult traffic.

That's because the little Marmon 8 does all these things—and more—and does them so naturally.

And the secret of it all—a new ratio of vital power to size and weight (in a staunch, low chassis), plus an entirely new and delightfully easy system of steering and control.
